

Las Vegas in a Day: Where to Stay, Dine and Get Pampered at a Spa

Feb. 18th, 2014 | Comments 0 | Make a Comment

Brunch

For an intimate and upscale brunch, head over to the Wynn and dine at La Cave. After being seated, you are handed a menu with a list of 16 food items that are served butler-style. The waiter will come around and offer things like berry compote pancakes, bacon and chorizo sausage cups, or tomato mozzarella flatbread, and you can accept or decline at your will. If something on the menu doesn't come around fast enough, don't hesitate to summon your butler.

The Bacchanal Buffet located at the Caesar's Palace is deserving of its "Best Buffet in Vegas" status. Although open for breakfast, lunch, and dinner, brunch is in a class of its own. At this luxury-style buffet, try the fried chicken and waffles, snow crab legs, or any of the hundreds of items for breakfast. The only downside is you may need a nap afterwards.

For a more relaxed and casual dining experience, have brunch at Beach Café located at the Tropicana hotel. Brunch items can be ordered from the menu, like their fluffy plate-sized pancakes or Frosted Flakes-crusted French toast. However, it's wise to choose the all-you-can-eat buffet, where omelets are made ready-to-order, and meats, potatoes, and fruit options are readily available. You can also enjoy the outside view of the hotel grounds in a beach-like setting.